

Nicotine and Tobacco Recovery Services

Don't do it alone.

Nicotine is a powerful, highly-addictive drug.

On average, people try to quit smoking five to seven times before they successfully quit for good.

The Institute for Prevention and Recovery has helped thousands of people to overcome their addiction to nicotine. Our nicotine and tobacco recovery services are staffed with certified professionals who provide treatment under the Public Health Service Guidelines.

Scientific research shows that individuals are four times more likely to quit using tobacco when participating in a structured program as compared to attempting to quit on their own.

Services are provided to individuals of all ages in Essex, Mercer, Middlesex, Monmouth, Ocean, Union and Somerset counties.

This is a FREE program, including free nicotine replacement therapies such as nicotine patches, gum and lozenges (no insurance required).
